7 Restaurants with patios you need to check out this summer

Outdoor-dining season has finally arrived.
MATT JUUL

The warm weather has kicked into full gear, which means it's about to get pretty busy for Boston restaurants with patios. Because there are so many al fresco options to check out around the city, we've put together a handy guide to a few you definitely need to check out this summer.

Enjoy the warm weather in South Boston at Coppersmith's Airdeck. BRIAN SAMUELS

1 Anthem Kitchen + Bar
The historic Faneuil Hall may be a bit of tourist trap, but it's still a pretty great area to grab a bite. Enjoy a few sips and snacks on the patio at Anthem Kitchen + Bar as you watch all the non-locals try to figure out where they're going.
101 S. Market, Faneuil Hall, Boston, anthemboston.com

2 Coppersmith
This South Boston hotspot has one of the best outdoor-seating areas in the city. Coppersmith's picnic-style Airdeck features a vintage Airstream that serves craft beer, wine and cocktails all season. Visitors can also munch on platters that are delivered in Radio Flyer Wagons,as well as go head-to-head with outdoor games like cornhole.
40 W. 3rd, South Boston, coppersmithboston.com

3 Lolita Cocina & Tequila Bar
Sip margaritas and fill up on great Mexican food at the new Lolita location in Fort Point. Guests who swing by this summer will also get to enjoy a great view of the waterfront with the restaurant's new patio.
253 Summer St., lolitamexican.com

People-watch in Faneuil Hall at Anthem's patio. PROVIDED

4 LuLu's Allston
Owned by Olivia Culpo's family and featuring "Chopped" champion Sarah Wade in the kitchen, Lulu's is already a must-try destination in Allston. Now the popular eatery has a newly renovated patio area, complete with a bocce court.
421 Cambridge St., Allston, lulusallston.com

5 Oak Long Bar + Kitchen
The patio at this popular Copley Square restaurant has a new look, plus some new bites and drinks. The outdoor area now has an array of couches and high-top tables, as well as its own special menu. Guests at the patio can sip bottled and frozen cocktails, fill up on oysters during a daily happy hour and cool off with boozy popsicles.
138 St. James Ave., oaklongbarkitchen.com

6 Southern Proper
In addition to serving up some great southern food in the South End, the recently opened eatery also has a scenic patio area. Take in some rays while munching on delicious bites by executive chef Jason Cheek.
600 Harrison Ave., southernproperboston.com

7 SRV
SRV—short for Serene Republic of Venice, not Stevie Ray Vaughan—has a beautiful patio area, featuring market-style lighting, lush greenery and seating for up to 46 people. Feast on traditional Venetian dishes while sipping Italian wines and cocktails at this South End hotspot.
569 Columbus Ave., srvboston.com

Everything you need to know for Boston Calling 2018

Your complete guide to this weekend's music fest. MATT JUUL

Get the scoop on what's new at Boston Calling this year. TY JOHNSON

Boston Calling is back with another stacked lineup of stars. Get ready for this weekend's music-filled festivities with our complete guide to this year's event.

When is it?
The annual music fest returns for its second year at Harvard's Athletic Complex in Allston May 25-27. Gates open at 2:30 p.m. Friday and noon Saturday and Sunday. The performances are scheduled to wrap up by 11 p.m. all three days.

Can I still get tickets?
There are still a few tickets up for grabs. Single-day VIP tickets are available for Friday and Saturday at $229 each, while single-day general admission tickets are available for all three days at $105 each. Three-day general admission tickets are available for $289. The box office will be open at noon on Friday and 11 a.m. Saturday and Sunday.

If you already purchased tickets, you can pick up your wristband early downstairs at the Tasty Burger in Harvard Square between 3 p.m. and 8 p.m. on Thursday. You can also pick them up at the festival at the front gate ticketing area.

What's new this year?
Organizers have made several changes to the layout and various offerings ahead of Boston Calling.

After suffering through long food lines and patchy cellphone service at last year's installment, fans won't have to worry about those issues this time around. In addition to making adjustments to the fest's physical layout to make things more accessible to fans, co-founder Brian Appel tells us that they've teamed up with Harvard's IT team to ensure guests can use their phones and the internet.

"Bringing a much more robust cellphone service plan along with Wi-Fi zones was a big undertaking," says Appel.

On the food side of things, there's a ton of new vendors setting up shop at the event this year, including Area Four, Caked Boston, Chicken & Rice Guys, The Chubby Chickpea, Commonwealth, Cookie DO, Deans Concessions, Jaju Pierogi and Union Square Donuts. Ikea also plans to show off its vegetarian version of its popular hot dog at the event. The VIP area now has a "Boardwalk Lounge" too, with offerings from places like Puritan & Co. and Love Art Sushi.

Attendees can also expect new artistic installations, an expanded craft beer experience, plus a slew of podcasts and comedians who'll take over the indoor arena, as well as an appearance by Natalie Portman. "Some of the coolest stuff that happening at this festival takes place inside that arena," says Appel.

What's the transportation situation?
"Public transportation is really the best way to come to this event," Appel says. "There's no reason to come and try to park in Allston. It's kind of a disaster when you do that."

The Red Line to Harvard Square station will be the best bet for most fans, as it's just 10 minutes away from the main entrance at 65 N. Harvard St. in Allston. Guests who're taking the Commuter Rail are also encouraged to stop at the Boston Landing station on the Worcester Line, which is just over a mile away from the fest. If you don't want to take the train, use ride-sharing apps, taxis or bicycles. The bus is another good option as the 66 and 86 routes stop at Harvard Stadium.

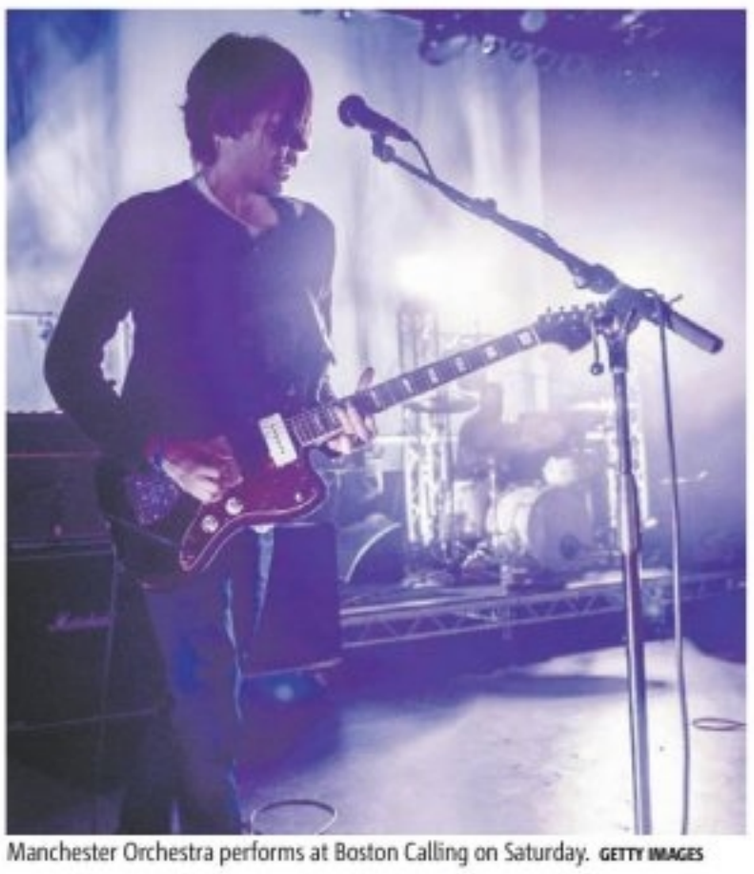
3 Questions with Manchester Orchestra

We caught up with guitarist Robert McDowell ahead of this weekend's fest.

MATT JUUL



Manchester Orchestra performs at Boston Calling on Saturday. GETTY IMAGES

PROVIDED

There will be no shortage of awesome rock stars and bands at Boston Calling, especially Saturday night. Before Jack White takes over the Green Stage for his headlining gig, indie rockers Manchester Orchestra will get in on the fun with a special late afternoon performance. Ahead of the band's appearance at Boston Calling, guitarist Robert McDowell gets us pumped for this weekend's three-day fest.

How pumped are you for your first Boston Calling?

We are looking forward to it. Up until May 5, we had been off doing family stuff. This will be our third or fourth weekend in a row we're out playing festivals, so it's kind of fun to be back in the swing of things.

Which bands and stars are you excited to see take the stage when you're not rocking out this weekend?

Unfortunately, we have to get off stage and hop directly onto a red-eye to fly across the country. I'm definitely bummed about that because it's a pretty gnarly lineup and everything. That's the downside of running around, won't get to see Eminem or anyone. [I've] never seen him. I always love seeing Queens of the Stone Age, and Jack White's pretty gnarly as well. I would say it's a fantastic lineup, one of the best this year.

How has Manchester Orchestra's sound evolved over the years?

The way that we've always operated is kind of finding a mission statement for each record and refusing to give up on it, even if it drives us insane. We've had different goals with each record. With "Cope," it was to make a massive rock record that's just in your face. "Hope" was to be its counterpart.

With this last one ["A Black Mile To The Surface"], we basically just set the bar somewhere where we didn't know what it was. Our goal was to have every song make us feel like, "Yes, we did it for this one." There's a lot of experiment, adding and taking away. It took us eight months in the studio to make. I would say that the sound of Manchester is really dictated by what's currently going on in our lives around us and what's inspiring us, rather than what happens to be the hip thing at the moment – which has worked for and against us.

How 'Solo' pays homage to the original 'Star Wars' trilogy

Seeds planted four decades ago pay off in the new flick. REED TUCKER

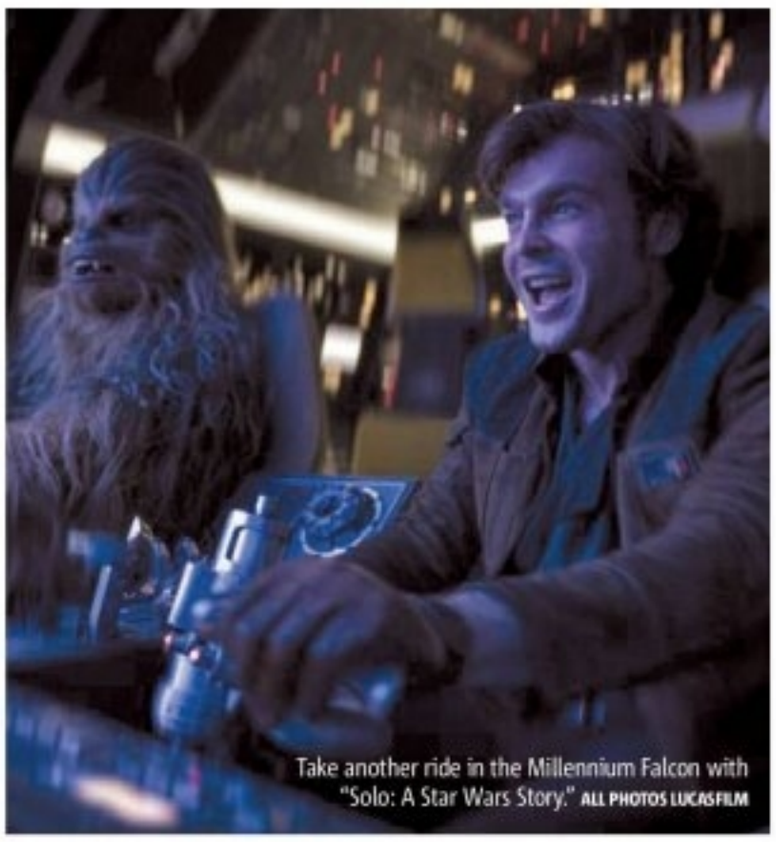
"Solo: A Star Wars Story" is a prequel, as you might have heard. The tale centers on a young Han Solo (Alden Ehrenreich) years before audiences meet him in 1977's "Star Wars." And like most prequels, it aims to flesh out a character's backstory at which has previously only been hinted. It's a tried-and-true Hollywood strategy that has been deployed with everyone from deranged killer Hannibal Lecter to, er, deranged killer Norman Bates.

Precious little about Han Solo's history is revealed in the original "Star Wars" and its sequels, "The Empire Strikes Back" and "Return of the Jedi." More details were given in spinoff novels and comic books, but Lucasfilm declared those non-canon in 2014.

As a result, father-and-son "Solo" screenwriters Lawrence and Jonathan Kasdan had to make do with what they had. Here are four lines from the original trilogy that were mined for "Solo" and look to finally be explained some four decades later.

"You've never heard of the Millennium Falcon? It's the ship that made the Kessel run in less than twelve parsecs." - Han in "Star Wars"
Never mind that this line was such a throwaway that "Star Wars" mastermind George Lucas mistakenly used parsec, a measure of distance instead of time. "Solo" explains just what the hell that Kessel run is and why Solo was bragging about it.

"Your ship? Hey, remember, you lost her to me fair and square." - Han to Lando in "The Empire Strikes Back"
It came as a shock that Lando was the Falcon's original owner. Now "Solo" shows exactly how the craft changed hands over a not-so-friendly game of Sabacc - a made-up card game that "Star Wars" owner Disney failed to register and is now being sued by an unrelated gaming company that snatched up the trademark.



Take another ride in the Millennium Falcon with "Solo: A Star Wars Story." ALL PHOTOS LUCASFILM

"You know, that ship saved my life quite a few times." - Lando in "The Empire Strikes Back"
Now we get to see some of those times, as a young Calrissian (Donald Glover) evades the evil Empire, pirates and Lovecraftian space squids.

"Han Solo. I'm captain of the Millennium Falcon." - Han in "Star Wars"
Simple line. But as Disney CEO Bob Iger promised last year, "Solo" does indeed explain how the title character "got his name." Now if someone could explain where "Mon Mothma" comes from.

Lando Calrissian's pansexuality

Lando is pansexual, Jonathan Kasdan recently told the Huffington Post. "And I love the fluidity — sort of the spectrum of sexuality that Donald appeals to and that droids are part of." In the movie, Lando has a curvaceous robot companion L3-37 (voiced by Phoebe Waller-Bridge), but it's unclear exactly how close the two are. There are hints, though, to Lando's potentially wide variety of interests. You be the judge.

"Everything you heard about me is true." - Lando
"I thought she loved me." - Lando on L3-37
I'm an expert with inter-twined celestial bodies." - Lando
"You're adorable." - Lando to Han
"You done flirting?" - L3-37 to Lando about Han

A long time ago, in a galaxy that's not so far away, Joonas Suotamo hoped to make it big as a basketball player.

While the 6'10" Pennsylvania State University alum only got to play as a pro in his native Finland, the baller-turned-actor found a new use for his height: taking over for the legendary Peter Mayhew as Chewbacca. Suotamo first got his Wookie on as a body double for Mayhew in "Star Wars: The Force Awakens" before receiving the gig full-time for "The Last Jedi."

The Finnish star is back as Chewbacca in "Solo: A Star Wars Story," which opens in theaters this weekend. Suotamo isn't the only one who's subbing in for a "Star Wars" icon, as Alden Ehrenreich is now playing a younger Han Solo in place of Harrison Ford.

We caught up with Suotamo about his experience filming "Solo," if he thinks he can ball with LeBron James and if he'll be back as the Wookie for "Episode IX."

Find out how Han met Chewie in "Solo: A Star Wars Story." LUCASFILM

GETTY IMAGES

How does the start of Han and Chewbacca's relationship in "Solo" compare to the end of their friendship in "Force Awakens"?

It's very interesting, the beginning of any relationship, but especially Han and Chewie's. All I can say is that it's not an easy one. It took me completely by surprise how they do end up meeting for the first time. It's very interesting to see on screen. They did a fantastic job at introducing all these characters and making it really feel like a spontaneous adventure story, where you don't know what's going to happen even though, in the back of your mind, you can kind of get the idea. Things can go either way in this film, and that's what I love about the feel of this movie.

Alden just did such a fantastic job. From day one, he was really prepared. He had studied a lot of "Star Wars" and knew a lot of terminology for the character and what it meant. He had been a fan as well all his life. I was really happy to be working with him because, unlike Harrison, I could feel a friendly connection there in the sense that we're both young guys who grew up with "Star Wars" and get to play these characters. He just really made it his own. I love that he's now getting the recognition that he most surely deserves.

Considering you were big into basketball before joining the world of "Star Wars," what's your prediction for the Celtics-Cavaliers series?

I'm really torn. I would love to see what the king can do, but I think the Celtics are really tough this year. I went to see them one time play the Raptors. They're a really solid team with a great coach. The Cavs are the underdogs, so I guess I want to see the Cavs come back in the series.

Do you think Chewbacca—or rather you as Chewbacca—could take LeBron James in a one-on-one game?

I think as soon as I put that hair suit on, I mean, I get a couple extra inches in my vertical. Surely there would be no one to stop Chewbacca in a basketball game.

Going back to "Star Wars," will you return for "Episode IX"?

All I will say is that J.J. [Abrams] is directing "Episode IX" and I would love to be involved. That's all I'm going to say.

What about a Chewbacca solo movie? Who would you want to team up with if that ever happened?

That would be exciting, wouldn't it? I think it would be very cool to team up with a group of stranded Jedi. That would be a very cool thing to happen.

"Solo: A Star Wars Story" flies into theaters May 25.

5 Things to do in Boston for Memorial Day weekend

Your guide to spending the holiday weekend in the city. MATT JUUL

Memorial Day weekend is finally here, which means summer has unofficially begun. From patriotic tributes to prehistoric zoo exhibits, here's how you can celebrate the holiday around the city.

Pay tribute to our fallen heroes at Boston Common. GETTY IMAGES

Patriotic tribute
Because Memorial Day honors those who've died during active military service, it's only appropriate that we pay tribute to our fallen heroes this weekend. Each year, Boston Common is decorated with more than 37,000 flags, which are placed at the Soldiers and Sailors Monument to remember service men and women from Massachusetts. The flag garden will be on display through Monday evening.
Through May 28, Boston Common, massmilitaryheroes.org

Give back
The USS Constitution Museum is also honoring our military heroes this weekend. The museum is offering free admission to active duty, retired and reserve military personnel, as well as partnering with Operation Gratitude so guests can create paracord "survival" bracelets or write thank you letters, which will be included in one of the 100,000 care packages the nonprofit sends to service members each year. Visitors will also be able to learn about how the "Old Ironsides" crew members weathered the War of 1812.
May 26-28, USS Constitution Museum, Charlestown Navy Yard, Building 22, Charlestown, ussconstitutionmuseum.org

The MFA is hosting a free open house. PROVIDED

Free museum admission
Both the Institute of Contemporary Art and the Museum of Fine Arts are offering free admission on Monday for Memorial Day. The MFA's open house will feature a slew of family-friendly activities, concerts and more. The ICA will also have a number of free activities available on Saturday and Sunday.
May 28, ICA, 25 Harbor Shore Drive, icaboston.org; MFA, 465 Huntington Ave., mfa.org

CapeFLYER returns
Take a trip to Cape Cod aboard the CapeFLYER when it returns for the season beginning Friday, May 25. Veterans and active military members can ride for free on May 27.
Beginning May 25, various locations, capeflyer.com

Destination Dino
You don't need to travel to Jurassic Park to have a fun prehistoric experience. The Franklin Park Zoo will unveil its new, life-like animatronic dinosaurs which will take over the venue starting this weekend.
Beginning May 26, Franklin Park Zoo, 1 Franklin Park Rd., zoonewengland.org

Dinosaurs are taking over the Franklin Park Zoo. PROVIDED

the GRUMBLE

Please. Stop. Clipping. Your. Fingernails. In. Public.

Pat King
Grumble Editor

When will the insanity stop? ISTOCK

There are some things that you see in public that will stick with you for the rest of the day. One of these momentum-changing events is sitting across from someone on a crowded bus, subway or even a busy office who is clipping their fingernails with no regard of their surroundings whatsoever. If you're like me, you can recall the feeling that this situation creates at the drop of a dime. Your skin crawls out of sheer terror as you hear the sounds breaking nails underneath the pressure of the metal clippers and see the discarded off-white C-shaped trimmings scattered across the floor. Shouldn't clipping your fingernails be more of a private personal hygiene thing? I'm sure wherever you are going has a bathroom that you could quickly duck into before trimming your claws down to a reasonable level. So why choose the middle of a public place where everyone is simply trying to get through their days? My commute is hard enough with having to dodge your fingernail boomerangs as they spin toward my face! Friends, get it together.

Aries Take your time. Listen to others and pay attention to detail. Prepare to take action, and strive for positive results.

Taurus Erratic behavior on your part or someone else's part will lead to trouble and a potential falling-out. Choose your words wisely and only act when you are fully prepared.

Gemini Share your feelings and present what you have to offer. Take action and look for those who have similar ambition to join you. Don't let the past interfere with the future.

Cancer Listen to what people are saying and refrain from making a judgment call based on hearsay alone. Get your information firsthand and proceed with compassion and diplomacy.

Leo The people you associate with will make a difference to the way your day unfolds. Stick to the people you know and understand, and avoid anyone who is a bad influence.

Virgo If you take part in events, change will happen. You can make a difference if you are up-front about how you would like to see things unfold. A function you attend will be informative.

Libra Take care of your responsibilities before you make a fuss. Someone will complain if you fall behind or fail to do your fair share. Take better care of your health.

Scorpio Look for a unique way to use your skills and knowledge. A personal change will make you stand out and grab the attention of someone you find interesting. Romance is highlighted.

Sagittarius Don't get loose with your cash when trying to impress someone. If you use your finesse and charm to attract attention, you'll do just fine. An innovative approach to work will pay off.

Capricorn Be careful how you handle business or personal partners. An emotional incident could set off an argument or cause uncertainty at home or with a close friend or relative.

Aquarius Stick close to home and carry out changes that will make your place inviting. Think matters through before you start a discussion that could alter an important relationship.

Pisces If you share your knowledge, experience and skills, you will be praised for your contribution. A real estate deal, move or renovation will improve your life. Financial gain is within reach. EUGENIA LAST

A Russian book is one of the documents in the "Women in WWII" exhibit. PROVIDED BY INTERNATIONAL MUSEUM OF WORLD WAR II

Natick museum exhibit puts spotlight on women in WWII

From Ansel Adams photography of the Massachusetts Women's Defense Corps to Soviet women sniper camo, the display shows the vast roles of women in WWII.

KRISTIN TOUSSAINT
kristin.toussaint@metro.us

When you think of women in World War II, the first image that pops into your mind is probably of Rosie the Riveter, with her flexed arm and polka-dot bandana.

"But that just scratches the surface of what women did," says Sue Wilkins, director of education at The International Museum of World War II in Natick.

The roles of women in WWII were vast, from taking over jobs traditionally held by men while they went off to fight, like factory work or window-washing, to actually seeing action on the front lines, as with Soviet women.

Called "Women in WWII: On the Home Fronts and the Battlefronts," the exhibition, which officially opens Friday, uses authentic artifacts and documents from during the war to look at how it affected and involved women in the United States as well as Britain, France, Japan, the Soviet Union and even those affected by the Holocaust.

Those artifacts include things like civil defense uniforms, propaganda posters, letters and photographs, featuring the first female garbage collectors in Chicago and the first female mail carriers in Washington, since men had been deployed.

One of the most visually striking things to Wilkins is the camouflage sniper uniform worn by Soviet women, the only women on the front lines in WWII, that doesn't let any bit of skin show.

Though the exhibit takes a global look at how the war affected women across the world, there is a special tie to Massachusetts as well, through never-before-shown photos by Ansel Adams, a renowned photographer who also took pictures of a U.S. internment camp.

"People who know some history of women in WWII sort of latch onto the Rosie the Riveter idea, but that is such a simple view of what women did," Wilkins says.

Don't get stuck like these Massachusetts drivers with these tips for your Memorial weekend travel. GETTY IMAGES

Here's when Boston traffic will be the worst for Memorial Day weekend getaways

Memorial Day weekend getaways are a great way to take advantage of that Monday off from work, but you don't want spend your whole time headed to the beach or your family's barbecue stuck in Boston traffic.

AAA worked with INRIX, a transportation analytics company, to look at worst times to hit the road around Boston, so you, and everyone else, can avoid those and make the most of your plans.

You certainly won't be alone on the road. More than 41.5 million Americans are expected to travel for Memorial Day weekend getaways this year, the majority of which — about 36.6 million — will be doing so by car, according to AAA.

The travel day in terms of Boston traffic is Thursday, May 24, according to AAA, specifically between 4:30 and 6:30 p.m. Since afternoon work commuters would be mixing on the roadways with those holiday travelers, leaving at this time means your trip could take nearly twice as long as usual due to traffic delays.

41.5M

More than 41.5 million Americans are expected to travel for Memorial Day weekend getaways this year

"Drivers should expect congestion across a greater number of days than in previous years, with the getaway period starting on Wednesday, May 23," said Graham Cookson, INRIX head of research, in a statement. "Our advice to drivers is to avoid peak commute times in major cities altogether — traveling late morning or early afternoon — or plan alternative routes."

MassDOT is advising drivers to take advantage of the department's "real-time" tools, like downloading the GoTime app, visiting mass511.com, calling 511 and following @MassDOT on Twitter, to keep up-to-date with real-time traffic conditions before on I-90 and other roads, before heading out.

To make sure your trip to and from your weekend getaways is as safe and smooth as possible, MassDOT will open the High Occupancy Vehicle Lane (HOV) on I-93 from 5 to 10 a.m. northbound as usual on the weekdays, and then for extended times including:

- Thursday, I-93 southbound from Boston to Quincy from 2 to 8 p.m.
- Friday, I-93 southbound from Boston to Quincy from 1 to 8 p.m.
- On Memorial Day, the HOV lane will not be deployed at all, but MassDOT is providing another perk: To keep you fresh-eyed behind the wheel as you head back from your Memorial Day weekend getaways, 18 MassDOT service plazas will offer free coffee 10 p.m. Monday night through 5 a.m. Tuesday morning. A new report from the Massachusetts Department of Public Health sheds light on opioid epidemic statistics in the commonwealth.
BRANDON GIESBRECHT/FLICKR FACEBOOK TWITTER LINKEDIN REDDIT STUMBLEUPON EMAIL

Report: Most Massachusetts 2017 opioid deaths occurred in Boston

A new report from the Massachusetts Department of Health takes a closer look at opioid epidemic statistics in the commonwealth.

kristin.toussaint@metro.us

1,874
There were 1,874 confirmed opioid-related deaths from January 2017 to December 2017, the report found.

85%
Out of the 1,775 deaths for which a toxicology screen was available, 85 percent of them tested positive for fentanyl, the powerful and lethal synthetic opioid.

There have been at least 201 confirmed opioid-related overdose deaths in Massachusetts in the first three months of 2018, according to a quarterly report from the state health department.

That's an estimated 5 percent decline compared to the first three months of 2017, according to the report. The Department of Health estimates that there will be an additional 240 to 305 deaths as part of that first-quarter tally once more information comes in.

The report also provided more information on the opioid epidemic across the state in 2017. There were 1,874 confirmed opioid-related deaths from January 2017 to December 2017, the report found.

Out of the 1,775 deaths for which a toxicology screen was available, 85 percent tested positive for fentanyl, the powerful and lethal synthetic opioid. There's also been an uptick in cocaine and fentanyl deaths without any heroin present across all races, though higher among black and Hispanic residents.

The department estimates that 2017 saw 133 fewer opioid-related deaths than the year before. The death tolls dropped for all Massachusetts residents by race except for black residents, for whom the rate increased from 15.6 per 100,000 residents in 2016 to 19.7 per 100,000 residents in 2017.

"The quarterly reports are snapshots in time and they give us extremely useful information to better understand the trajectory of this epidemic," said Public Health Commissioner Monica Bharel in a statement. "While we're making progress, we continue to increase access to treatment and recovery supports, and will tailor responses for particular populations including black residents whose overdose death rates are increasing, based on this data."

Most opioid-related deaths were among white, non-Hispanic residents, with that demographic making up 1,510 of all confirmed opioid-related deaths in 2017.

For the first time, the report also looked at where the opioid epidemic is hitting the hardest by city and town within Massachusetts. The most opioid-related deaths in 2017 occurred in Boston, with 266 confirmed, followed by Worcester, with 109.

The best American 'music cities' that aren't Nashville

Nashville isn't the only American city with deep ties to music. These destinations have also left their mark.

Fodor's Travel

Nashville, Tennessee, earned the nickname "Music City" for fostering some country-music legends, but there are many other places in the U.S. that have left their mark on American music. Other cities may be recognized today for their live music venues and festivals, but these were the original music destinations.

Clarksdale, Mississippi
Known as the "Ground Zero of the Blues," Clarksdale is where you'll find the best places to catch live blues music. Start at the Ground Zero Blues Club, partially owned by Morgan Freeman, and order a batch of Delta tamales, a local staple. Tour the Delta Blues Museum fto learn about the area's history and its musical ties. Visit during the Juke Joint Festival when artists perform at art galleries, bars, and even on the street.

Macon, Georgia
Set in the heartland of the Peach State, the small town of Macon was where acts like Little Richard, Otis Redding and the Allman Brothers Band spent time before hitting it big. A number of acts, especially Souther-rock bands, were supported by Alan Walden and his Capricorn Records. Rock Candy Tours is run by Walden's daughter and her husband, and documents the music history of the city. Grab breakfast at H&H Restaurant, where the Allman Brothers used to dine before hitting it big. Tour the brothers' home at the Big House Museum. Grant's Lounge and Hargray Capitol Theatre also host live music acts. Don't miss Bragg

Chapel Hill's hometown heroes Superchunk. GETTY IMAGES

Jam, an annual festival created in honor of local musicians that died in a car accident.

The Triangle, North Carolina
Like Virginia, the state of North Carolina has ties to all sorts of music, especially bluegrass. But it's the college towns of Chapel Hill, Raleigh and Durham, known collectively as "The Triangle," that launched the careers of many rock bands. Starting in the 1950s, the Triangle town of Carrboro fostered acts like James Taylor through the Cat's Cradle Coffeehouse, which still hosts bands. In more recent years, bands like Superchunk, Squirrel Nut Zippers and Ben Folds Five rose through the ranks in Chapel Hill. Make sure to catch a show at The Cave, where you might see an act before they hit it big.

Jacksonville, Florida
Florida's music scene runs the gamut in terms of genres, from the 1990s pop boom out of Orlando to punk in Tampa and Latin music in Miami. It was the breeding ground of notable musicians like Gram Parsons, Jim Morrison and Tom Petty. Jacksonville was home to the Southern-rock scene in the 1970s and '80s, combining country and rock. In recent years, pop-punk bands Red Jumpsuit Apparatus and Yellowcard hit it big after forming in Jacksonville. Catch a show at one of the area's music venues, like Jack Rabbits or 1904 Music Hall. The Rockville Festival is held every spring and showcases both established and up-and-coming bands.

Richmond, Virginia
Virginia blues, rock, and folk bands. Old Crow Medicine Show hails from Harrisonburg, while Dave Matthews Band was formed in nearby Charlottesville. But Richmond's music legacy has a bit more edge to it. The punk and metal scene was formed in the 1990s at clubs like Twisters and Strange Matter, and bands like Gwar and Lamb of God both formed at Virginia Commonwealth University. While you're in town, visit GWARBar, a restaurant owned by the eccentric band, and peruse the record stores and music stores in Carytown.

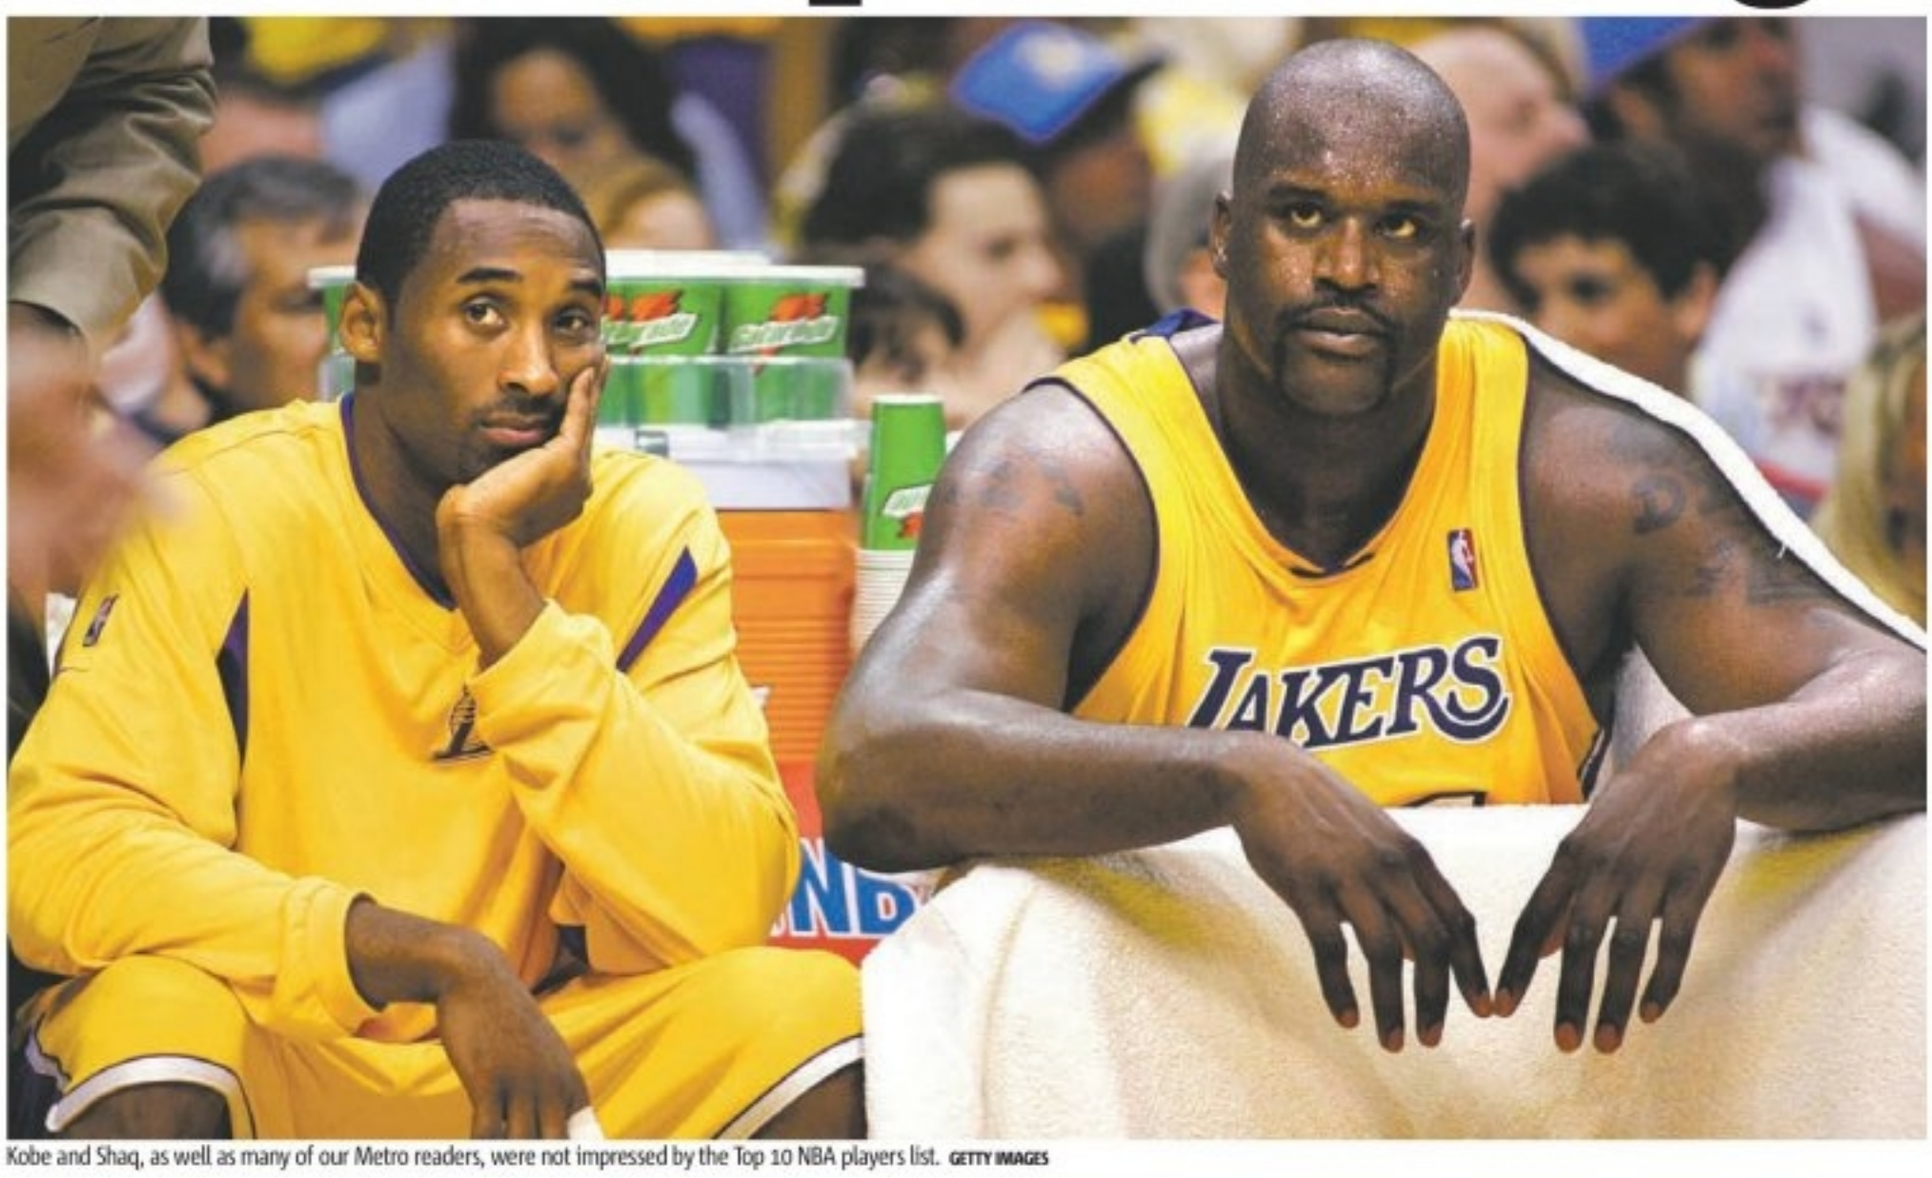
Metro readers fire back at NBA Top 10 rankings



Kobe and Shaq, as well as many of our Metro readers, were not impressed by the Top 10 NBA players list. GETTY IMAGES

@Burke_Metro

Not too surprising, but our top 10 NBA players of all-time list once again got people's blood boiling. Rarely is there full agreement on this thing, as this list has become one of the best sports arguments out there. Everyone has "their guy."

Predictably, most people had beef with Wilt Chamberlain being so low. Also this year there were also a lot of cries about why Kobe and Shaq were left off the list.

We respond to your responses here.

@ZMoneyBC: Disrespectful list. Many picks I disagree with but not including Kobe Bryant is a nefarious travesty … You really leaving Kobe off your list like that? Really Bruhhh? Bill Russell #2?! Kareem that low!? Where is the reasoning for leaving both Kobe and Shaq off? How in the world could one even argue Duncan or West is better?

Burke: I always go back to this argument with Kobe. His Lakers finished with a record of 34-48 in 2004-05 and they missed the playoffs altogether. Kobe was IN HIS PRIME. No other player on this list missed the playoffs in their prime.

As for Shaq, the difference between him and Duncan is that Duncan had sustained excellence. Shaq's peak was higher than Duncan's, just like Bird's peak was higher than Magic's. But both Duncan and Magic always had their respective teams in the mix for a title – year-in and year-out.

Donna Jones: Hey Matt, I'm griping about Dr. J from Philadelphia not being on that Top 10 greatest NBA list in the Metro. R U Kidding?!

Burke: Dr. J is close, but no cigar. A lot of his prime was spent in the ABA against inferior competition, and he won just one NBA title. If you replaced Jerry West (who also has just one title) with Doc on your list I wouldn't gripe too much. But to put Julius higher than No. 9 or so is a big ask.

@toney_stacks: Wilt at No. 8?!

Burke: You Wilt people are relentless. He was a man amongst boys, right? Russell ate his lunch in every NBA Finals … and Shaq was a man amongst boys, too. Shaq didn't make my list. I'm doing you a favor.

Chip Rawls:
1. Wilt
2. Russell
3. LeBron
4. Oscar
5. Michael Jordan
6. Jerry West
7. Kareem
8. Elgin Baylor
9. Bob Pettit
10. Julius Erving

Burke: I'm guessing Chip hasn't downloaded that new Childish Gambino song yet as six out of the top 10 players on his list retired before LeBron James was even alive. Michael Jordan at No. 5 is a first, too.

Stephen Bowman: Hey Matt, I'm not going to berate you about your list because these lists are supposed to be objective, although LeBron moving ahead of Magic and Bird is about as plausible as how far ahead his hairline has moved. But the main criticism - no Shaq or Kobe? Now I know, as a Celtics fan the Lakers are normally despised - but as a basketball fan these were two of the best players of their generation. And for a time, both played for the Lakers at the same time! So if championships are the tiebreaker, both won more than LeBron. With or without each other. Either way, love the debate the list sparks! And, I enjoy the column.

Burke: Fair enough, Stephen. Thanks for reading.

Metro Top 10

Here is the list that has everyone up in arms.

1. Michael Jordan
2. Bill Russell
3. LeBron James
4. Magic Johnson
5. Larry Bird
6. K. Abdul-Jabbar
7. Tim Duncan
8. Wilt Chamberlain
9. Jerry West
10. Hakeem Olajuwon

Jaylen Brown and the Celtics will be back in Cleveland on Friday (8:30 p.m., ESPN) for Game 6 of the Eastern Conference Finals. A potential Game 7 would be at TD Garden on Sunday (8:30 p.m., ESPN). GETTY IMAGES

Lax Final Four back at Gillette Stadium

Albany, Yale, Duke and Maryland will battle for college lacrosse supremacy.

RICH SLATE
sports@metro.us

For the fifth time in the past 10 years (2008, 2009, 2012 and 2017), the center of the lacrosse universe will be in Foxboro for Memorial Day weekend.

The Division 1 men's Final Four (Albany vs. Yale and Duke vs. Maryland) in addition to the Division 2 (Merrimack vs. Saint Leo) and Division 3 (Wesleyan vs. Salisbury) championship games come to Gillette Stadium starting on Saturday afternoon and stretching to Monday afternoon. Local lacrosse fans are in for a treat as not only does the biggest event of the year return to their backyard, but the Major League Lacrosse All-Star Game also takes place at Harvard Stadium (home of the Boston Cannons) on June 28 as the MLL All-Stars take on Team USA.

The Division 1 Final Four is all chalk since the defending champ from Maryland (14-3) is the top seed, upstart Albany (16-2) is No. 2, Ivy League power Yale (15-3) is No. 3 and Duke (15-3) is No. 4.

There are plenty of storylines too since Albany is making their first Final Four appearance, Yale hasn't been here since 1990 and Duke is bidding for its fourth NCAA title (all since 2010). As you would expect with such powerhouse programs, they feature some of the top players in college lacrosse this season. The Tewaaraton Award is their version of the Heisman Trophy and three of the final five nominees will be in action this weekend: Blue Devils senior attackman Justin Guterding (61 goals, 43 assists) who is the leading scorer in the country, Bulldogs senior attackman Ben Reeves (56 goals, 46 assists) and Terrapins senior midfielder Connor Kelly (45 goals, 33 assists). While they aren't nominated in that loaded field, the Great Danes have two superstars in their own right in senior attackman Connor Fields (31 goals, 50 assists) and freshman attackman sensation Tehoka Nanticoke (49 goals, 32 assists).

If you like underdogs, the first semifinal noon, ESPN2) is definitely the game for you as either Albany or Yale will make their first-ever championship game appearance on Monday (1, ESPN2). They have both bounced back from late season losses and proven why they were top-ranked teams all-season long in 2018. To get here, Yale survived a shootout vs. UMass (15-13) in the first round and a grind-it-out battle vs. Loyola (8-5) in the quarterfinals. Albany is known for its high-octane offense and they haven't disappointed with a first-round blow-out of Richmond (18-9) and a 15-13 victory against Denver in the quarterfinals-another title contender.

Justin Guterding will be looking to bring the trophy back to Durham. GETTY IMAGES

If blue bloods (no pun intended) are more your thing, then the second semifinal (2:30, ESPN2) is more likely the game that you are looking forward to. Up until last year, Maryland was the ultimate choke artist in college lacrosse as they had lost in a whopping nine finals before finally getting over the hump last season with a 9-6 triumph vs. Ohio State for their first crown since 1975. Duke has been the best program in the past nine years as they go for their fourth title (they also won it in 2010, 2013 and 2014).

Red Sox set to take on NL East-leading Braves

The Red Sox, owning the best record in baseball at 33-15, are set to take on one of the National League's finest this Memorial Day weekend.

The Atlanta Braves – the current leaders of the NL East with a 29-18 mark – will be in town to face the Sox for three games, starting Friday night.

In the opener, the Sox will hand the ball to Eduardo Rodriguez (4-1, 4.13 ERA). Rodriguez pitched strong in his last outing, a 5-0 Sox win over the Orioles, despite allowing nine hits as Baltimore did not cross the plate. In nine starts this season, Rodriguez has only allowed five or more runs twice.

Drew Pomeranz (1-2) will look to get back on track during a matinee at the Fens on Saturday (1 p.m., NESN). In his last start, Pomeranz allowed four earned runs in just four innings of work on May 18 against Baltimore.

Eduardo Rodriguez will get the ball for the Sox on Friday night. GETTY IMAGES

Sox ace Chris Sale (5-1, 2.17 ERA) is slated to get the ball for the Sox in the series finale on Sunday (1 p.m. , NESN).

On Memorial Day Monday, the Sox will welcome Toronto to town — with David Price (4-4, 4.38 ERA) slated to throw.
